

Brisbane, Queensland

Princess Alexandra Hospital in the inner Brisbane suburb of Woolloongabba is one of Australia's leading teaching and research hospitals and is the tertiary referral centre for the Southern Zone of Queensland Health.

The hospital is protected by a network of seventeen Notifier Fire Indicator Panels with a full ONYXWorks™ graphics package which provides Emergency Responders with a complete picture of an event from one centralised location.

An Emergency Warning and Intercommunication System comprising nineteen networked I-2000 Panels enables Emergency Personnel to communicate easily and effectively with each other to ensure, if the need should ever arise that the hospital can be quickly and safely evacuated with the minimum of difficulty.
